

Editorial

This issue of the Sudanese Journal of Paediatrics has updating review articles on medical education namely problem based learning as well as current scientific knowledge and guidelines for management of two priority health problems in childhood measles and nutrition.

The issue reflects the scientific research of Paediatricians in the field of acute respiratory infections, perinatal morbidity and mortality and visceral leishmaniasis as well as case reports of educative and updating nature. The Association is determined to maintain the publication in spite of difficulties as a scientific forum for publication of the work of researchers in the field of child health.

Our thanks are due to the reviewers, the authors, the editorial board and certainly the editors for this excellent publication.
